What TPP Is

- The Tenancy Preservation Program (TPP) is a homelessness prevention program.
- TPP works with individuals and families with disabilities, behavioral health disorders, and complex health needs, facing eviction because of behavior related to the disability or health condition.
- TPP consults with the Massachusetts Housing Court and functions as a neutral party to the landlord and tenant.
- Since 2017, the TPP Upstream Pilot has accepted referrals prior to any legal action against the tenant.

What TPP Does

- TPP clinicians assess the reasons for the eviction and the underlying disability and health issues, identify needed services, develop a service plan to maintain the tenancy, and monitor the household until stabilized.
- TPP makes regular reports to all parties involved in the case, i.e. the Court, property owner, and tenant.
- If the tenancy cannot be preserved, TPP will facilitate referrals to other agencies that may be able to offer transition services to prevent homelessness.

Cases vs Consultations

- To be eligible for TPP services:
  - A member of the household must have a disability, impairment, behavioral health disorder or complex medical condition, which results in behavior that is violating a provision of the lease agreement;
  - There is a lease violation (Upstream) or the Landlord/Housing Provider has issued a Notice to Quit;
  - The tenancy must otherwise be sustainable, i.e. the household has sufficient income to afford the rent;
  - The household must agree to participate in a plan that addresses the lease violation; and
  - The landlord and/or the Court must agree to delay the eviction proceedings while TPP works with the household.
- Otherwise, TPP provides consultation and referral services.

Regional Programs

- TPP operates within the regional jurisdictions of the Housing Court Divisions, through the following non-profit providers of clinical and/or homeless services:
